Oveta, Owned by W. W. Woodring, Breaks Down and Fails to Recover.

Horsemen of the city were surprised yesterday to learn that Oveta, the crack trotting mare belonging to W. W. Woodring of Bingham, had died. The mare was considered one of the best trotters in the intermountain country, and has been familiar on Utah tracks for the past couple of years. She has a mark of 2:124, and was looked upon to even lower these figures before the end of the state fair recent this fall. The end was sudden the races this fall. The end was sudden, the horse dying late Sunday night.

time and entered in the free-for-all race at Wandamere on Saturday. She was a popular favorite with the crowd when the race started, but it was seen in the first heat she was not trotting up to her training form. She finished second to Alzama in this heat in 2:18, but came back stronger in the second heat and although heaten made a head to head race of it to the wire. This was her last effort, and although the mare finished the race, she was not in the running at all. It was given out at the time that the animal was not well, and after the race an examination showed the horse was far from being right. She was at once put under a veterinarian's care, but grew worse that a veterinarian's care, but grew worse that night and the next day, dying Sunday Woodring has refused $1,500 for the animal. Oveta was always a popular starier in all the races, and had many followers in the pool boxes whenever she started.

BOA IS BACK AFTER

John S. Boa, the crack trap and field shot, arrived home after an extended visit in the northwest and east. While away Boa attended the Grand American at Chicago, where he was one of the four hundred contestants. He also took part in the Spokane shoot and the Montana state shoot. He expects to be around the city for some time, and warm times are at least. With Boa and Dorsey Burges in town at the same time, trap shoot is liable to take a new lease on life.
